Texas Partners in Policymaking offers innovative and intensive advocate training for Families with children with developmental disabilities and Self-Advocates with developmental disabilities.

Applicants selected for the 35-member class will receive 168 hours of training during eight weekends and will learn best practices from national and state experts in the disability field to enable them to become partners with policy-makers at the local, state, and federal levels.

The eight weekend training sessions are scheduled from August 2017 to April 2018.

Our goal:

To ensure the full participation and inclusion of children and adults with disabilities in all areas of life.
